

Weather Briefing

for the ArkLaMiss region

January 20, 2017

NWS JACKSON, MS

Highlights

- Two rounds of severe weather possible starting tonight through Sunday.
- First round will focus on the south.
 - Main concerns being large hail and wind with some potential for tornadoes.
- Second round comes in Saturday night into early Sunday.
 - Large hail and wind being the primary threat.

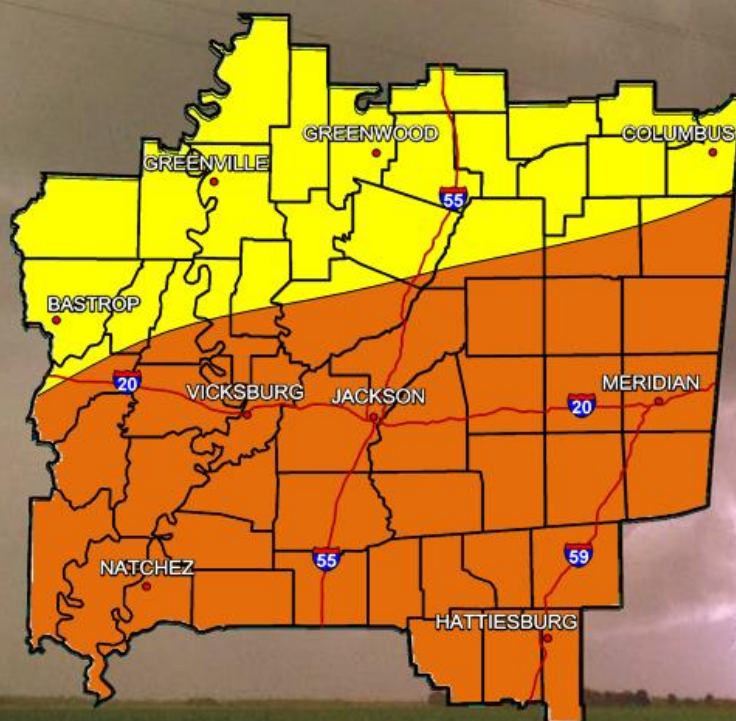

Severe Weather Tonight

Severe Weather Expected Late Tonight
After 11pm Tonight through 7am Saturday

Weather Forecast Office
Jackson, MS

Issued January 20, 2017 10:30 AM CST

Elevated Threat:

Severe storms expected with:

- Hail to the size of golfballs
- Damaging wind gusts of 60 mph
- Few tornadoes

Limited Threat:

Severe storms possible with:

- Hail to the size of quarters
- Damaging wind gusts of 60 mph

Timing:

- After 11 pm this evening lasting through 7 am Saturday morning

Limited

Elevated

Significant

Extreme

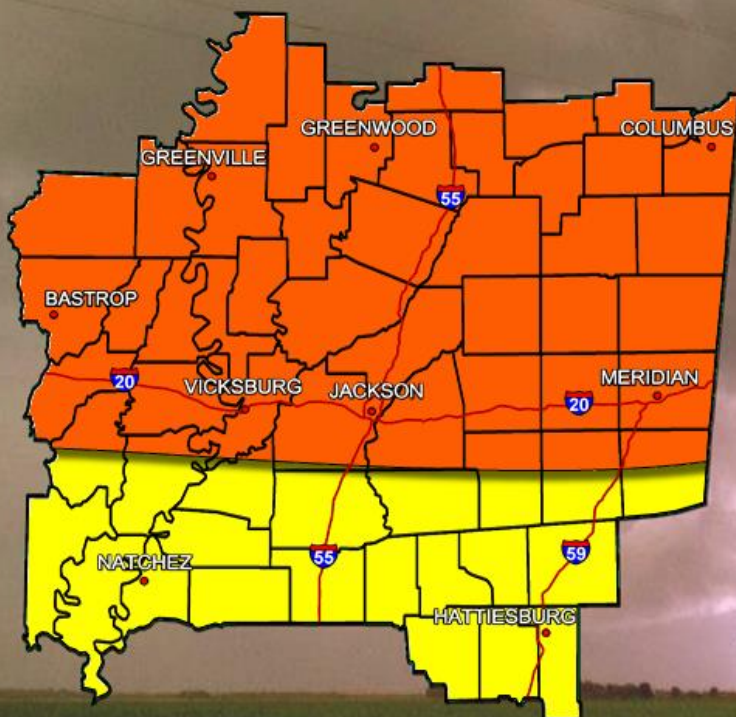

Severe Weather Saturday Night

Severe Storms Expected Mainly Saturday Night into Early Sunday

Weather Forecast Office
Jackson, MS

Issued January 20, 2017 10:12 AM CST

Elevated Threat:

- Large hail to golfball size with a few possibly larger
- Damaging wind gusts of 60 mph or greater
- Tornado can't be ruled out

Limited Threat:

- Quarter to golfball size hail
- Damaging wind gusts
- Tornado can't be ruled out

Timing:

5pm Saturday to
Early Sunday
Morning

Localized Flooding

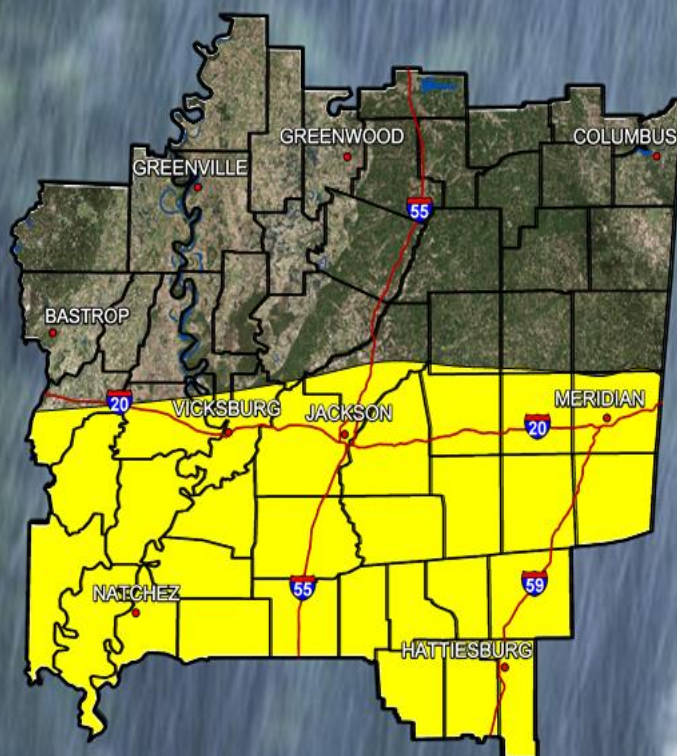

Localized Flash Flooding Possible

Tonight through Saturday Morning

Weather Forecast Office

Jackson, MS

Issued January 20, 2017 12:01 PM CST

Limited Threat:

- Additional heavy rain could bring another 1-2 inches on top of saturated soils. This could lead to some localized flooding.

Timing:

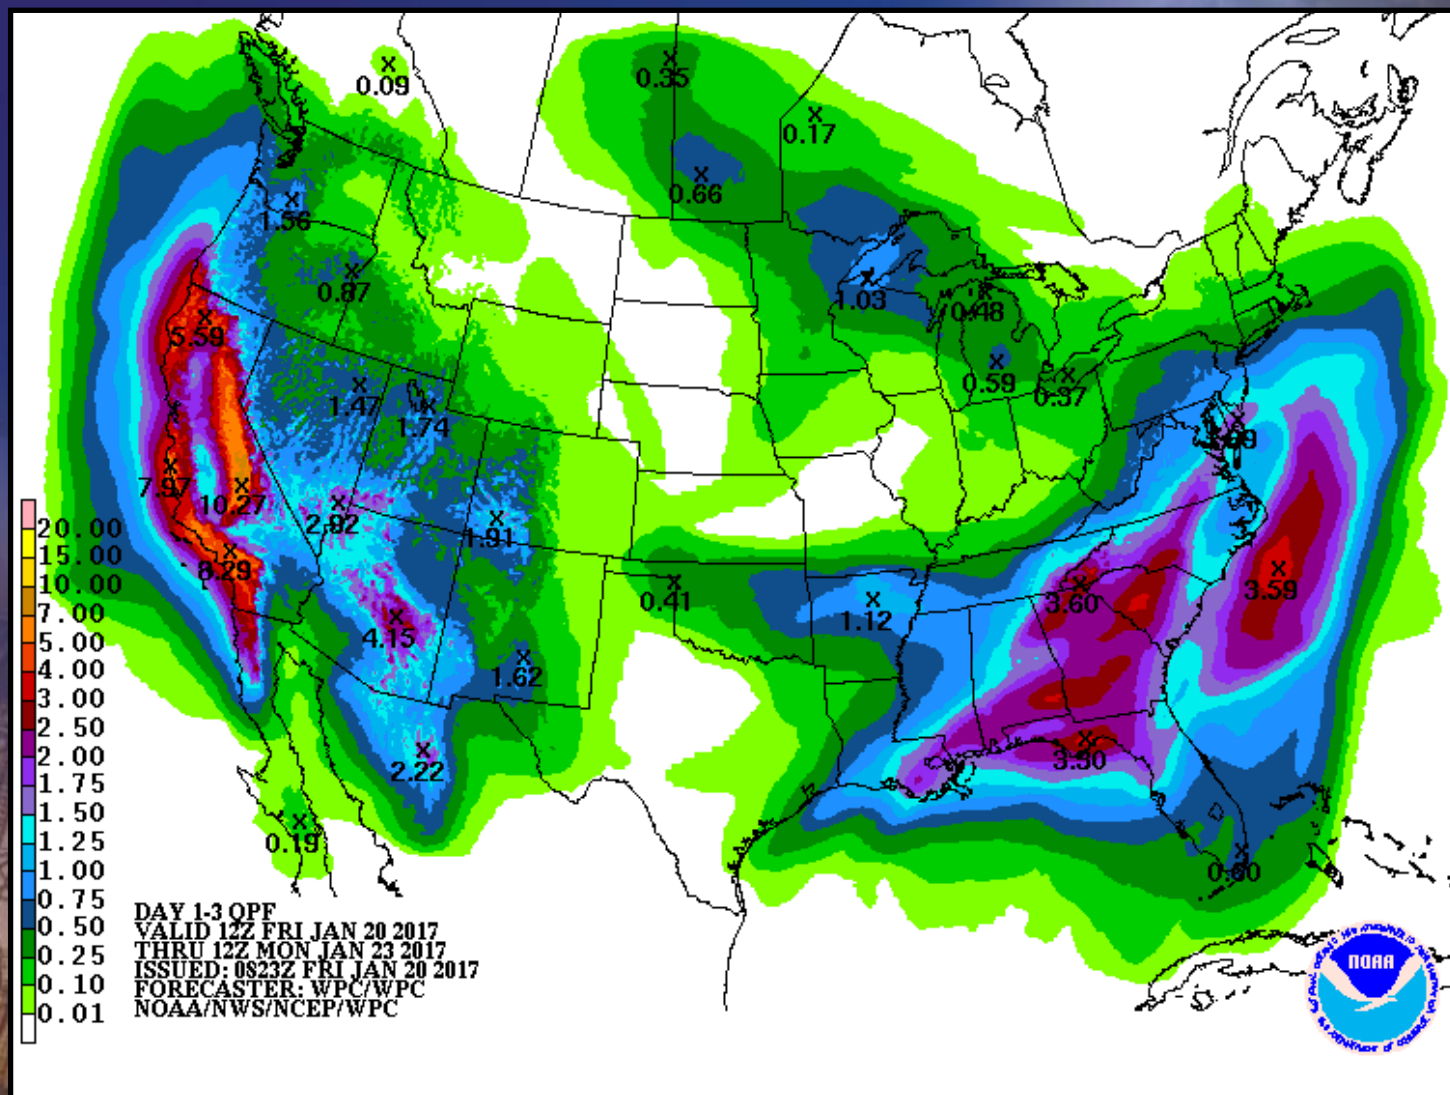

Tonight through Saturday morning

Impacts:

Heavy rainfall & already saturated soils may lead to flash and river flooding.

Days 1-3 Precipitation

Have multiple ways to get warnings weather.gov

Thanks for viewing NWS Jackson's Multi-media Weather Briefing!

*These briefings are usually conducted on Mondays and sometimes on Thursdays. If you have any feedback or suggestions, please contact us at 601-936-2189,
or via Facebook or Twitter under, NWSJacksonMS.*